

Frequently Asked Questions

Draft Burial and Cremation

Nhulunbuy Corporation

Disclaimer

This information sheet is not legal advice and does not cover all of the requirements proposed under the draft Burial and Cremation Bill. It is intended only as a quick reference for some main provisions. The full Bill should be read for a complete picture.

Background

The Northern Territory Government is developing new Burial and Cremation legislation. This legislation will repeal and replace the current Cemeteries Act.

Q&As

What will the corporation have to do under the new Act?

The corporation will generally continue to:

- care for and maintain the cemetery
- ensure burials of human remains and exhumations in the cemetery are undertaken in accordance with the Act
- fund the maintenance of the cemetery
- ensure there is access to equipment to undertake burials and exhumations
- establish and maintain records of burials and exhumations undertaken in the cemetery
- establish and maintain the registers
- establish a cemetery plan
- establish cemetery policies.

On the website – cemetery plan including general cemetery information, burial application form and exclusive right of burial application form.

Sign at the cemetery – with the name of the cemetery and corporation contact details.

Issue burial permits – the person appointed by the corporation as manager of the cemetery will check that the application documents are correct and issue a burial permit.

Keep a register of burials and a register of exclusive rights of burial – the person appointed by the corporation as manager of the cemetery will keep a register of who is buried, when and where, and a register of exclusive rights of burial.

What type of information goes into the burial register?

- full name of the deceased
- gender
- date of birth
- country of birth
- address of residence immediately before death
- date of death
- place of death
- cause of death
- last occupation before death
- marital status
- date of burial
- identification of the grave (e.g. grave number, GPS location)
- the type of burial (e.g. horizontal in coffin)
- the depth to the coffin/shroud
- descriptive details and date of any memorial erected at the grave
- the name of the person who officiated at the burial ceremony.

Is the burial register available to the public?

The public may view the register in accordance with corporation policy. The corporation may set a fee to view the register.

Which cemeteries in Nhulunbuy will be covered under the new Act?

The Nhulunbuy Public Cemetery will come under the new Act.

How many deaths are there in Nhulunbuy each year?

Year	2012	2013	2014	2015	2016	2017
Deaths	4	8	3	5	N/A	N/A

Source - Australian Bureau of Statistics, Local Government Area statistics

Will the corporation have to have grave numbers on plots?

No. There needs to be some way to identify a grave but it could be by other means such as GPS co-ordinates.

Can paperwork for burial permits be done electronically?

The corporation's process could include receiving applications and sending permits by email.

Where will cemetery records such as burial registers need to be kept?

The corporation needs to keep the records safe in the same way that all corporations' records must be kept safe. The records could be kept electronically. It is a matter for the corporation.

What information is needed in a cemetery plan?

There would be a basic diagram of the cemetery and information about the types of burial (e.g. horizontal) available.

What type of memorials/headstones will be allowed in cemeteries covered under the new Act?

The corporation can have a policy about headstones and memorials.